

Tory Amorello, Interim CEO

Tory is an experienced nonprofit executive, having been both the Head of School for an independent day and boarding school in New Hampshire (Waterville Valley Academy) as well as the Executive Director for their associated nonprofit (WVBBTS). In her tenure at Waterville she had the opportunity to lead from a financial, operational, strategic, and educational perspective. She led the organization through a robust strategic planning process at the end of her first year of leadership. In subsequent years, her team's work focused on completing as many of the operational goals in the plan as possible with much success.

Tory hails from the East Coast. Although she grew up and then returned to New England, she attended Whitman College in the Pacific Northwest, and spent time teaching and coaching at the Colorado Rocky Mountain School in Carbondale, Colorado.

In her words: "All of my past experiences will serve me well as the Interim CEO of Alaska YWCA. As the chief executive of a nonprofit organization, my job has been to strategize, lead, fundraise and organize, but most importantly to support the mission. I look forward to helping this historic and significant organization evolve programming, fundraising, and strategy, as we hold fast to our central mission, which is to empower women and eradicate racism."
